When I met your eyes, something hit me clean,
Like the weight I'd carried finally slipped off me.
You saw the parts of me I keep locked down,
An angel staring back, cutting through the sound.
My heart kicked hard, everything turned sharp,
And something in me said, don't pull apart.

Like turning up the stereo until the noise fades out,
Like finding a place — a place I'd only dreamt about.

You make me feel like I can take on anything,
Lift me past the heaviness I've been dragging.
You're the calm in the chaos I've been fighting for-
That place I chased but never found before.
Every love song in my head turns into something I can't deny,
I'm slipping, I'm sinking, I'm losing my mind

I get lost in the places only you can find me,
Warm and comfortable in the way that you hold me.
I sparked something in you - you thought was gone,
And you would wait a lifetime just to prove me wrong.
You make me feel alive in a way I can't ignore,
A quiet kind of peace that hits deeper than before.

Like turning up the stereo until the noise fades out,
Like finding a place — a place I'd only dreamt about.

You make me feel like I can take on anything,
Lift me past the heaviness I've been dragging.
You're the calm in the chaos I've been fighting for-
That place I chased but never found before.
Every love song in my head turns into something I can't deny,
I'm slipping, I'm sinking, I'm losing my mind.

Every scar I carry — every night I pushed through,
Only makes this hit harder standing here with you.
I can't explain it — don't need to anymore,
You're the reason I'm not running like before.

You make me feel like I can take on anything,
Lift me past the heaviness I've been dragging.
You're the place I didn't know existed, now I'm sure,
The home without a name — I've always longed for.
Every love song in my head becomes a promise I can't deny,

I'm slipping, I'm sinking, I'm losing my mind.

Like déjà vu remembering a life I thought I knew,
I feel it every time I get close to you.
